How did the Fund perform in the last year?

The Champlain Small Company Fund (Advisor Shares) returned -5.53% for the year-to-date period ending December 31, 2025, which was behind the 12.81% return for the Russell 2000 Index and trailed the 17.15% return for the Russell 3000 Index.

This Fund's relative underperformance compared to the Russell 2000 Index was primarily driven by stock selection in information technology, health care, consumer, and financials sectors. Technology performance was impacted by an overweight in the software industry and selection within the sector. AI is reshaping the software landscape – expanding what products can do and increasing uncertainty around how quickly those capabilities translate into durable monetization. We expect pricing to continue shifting away from fixed, per-seat subscriptions and toward usage-based and agent-driven models, which can make reported metrics and near-term expectations more volatile. For our Fund's technology holdings, we believe this backdrop is ultimately constructive because our core software exposures – spanning data infrastructure and resilience, hybrid cloud platforms, security, and developer workflow – sit in the "plumbing" of modern workloads where AI adoption tends to increase demand over time.

For the year, health care underperformed due to several factors, including an underweight position in biotech, an overweight position in health care equipment & supplies, no exposure to the pharmaceuticals industry, and an overweight allocation in health care technology. The consumer sectors, in aggregate, underperformed for the year, largely due to stock selection. Freshpet's shares have been under pressure as its growth normalizes to a more sustainable rate. As we evaluate this holding, we remain mindful of competition and the consumer's ability/willingness to afford a dog and feed it premium food. Simply Good Foods, a position exited late in the year, was also a significant detractor, as management sought to shift exposure to higher-growth areas of the business.

Stock selection in banks was a key driver of relative underperformance in financials as investors positioned for lower rates, a relaxed M&A environment, and continued to show a bias for lower quality operators (as measured by Return on Assets). Our preference for banks with long histories of industry-leading profitability and limited loan losses was not helpful. In addition, Baldwin Insurance Group shares detracted from performance, with a 38% decline. During the third quarter, management reduced its second-half guidance due to slowing property growth, a new reinsurance arrangement, and disruption in its Medicare business.

Despite headwinds, we remain committed to our investment process and the philosophy that cash earnings, sustainable above average growth of cash flow, attractive returns on capital, and efficient capital allocation drive superior long-term shareholder returns. We do not know when the markets and investors will reward these quality attributes, but we are confident that the sun will shine again on what is currently in the shade.

Householding

Rule 30e-1 of the Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended, permits funds to transmit only one copy of a proxy statement, annual report or semi-annual report to shareholders (who need not be related) with the same residential, commercial or electronic address, provided that the shareholders have consented in writing and the reports are addressed either to each shareholder individually or to the shareholders as a group. This process is known as “householding” and is designed to reduce the duplicate copies of materials that shareholders receive and to lower printing and mailing costs for funds. Once implemented, if you would like to discontinue householding for your accounts, please call toll-free at 1-866-773-3238 to request individual copies of these documents. Once the Fund receives notice to stop householding, we will begin sending individual copies 30 days after receiving your request.
